By treating materials unconventionally, he discovers surprising techniques that yield functional yet intriguing designs. He graduated from Design Academy Eindhoven in 2018. timteven.com Tijs Gilde's work is driven by material research, with an emphasis on structures, patterns, and color. His intuitive process leads to experimental phases that evolve into scalable objects, often for interiors. With a background in trend forecasting, Tijs taps into market needs. studiogUILTY.com Paul Coenen explores materials and techniques, blending modern and traditional methods. His straightforward designs are shaped by the materials and processes used. He graduated from Design Academy Eindhoven in 2019. paulcoenen.nl Studio Guilty Most products of Tijs Gilde derive from material researches that have rather impulsive and intuitive starting points. The researches show a unique fascination for structures, patterns and colour whilst exploring new possibilities of producing and making. After experimental phases the next challenge is to develop the techniques into large scale producible objects, usually for interior purposes. Having a background in trend forecasting and strategy, Tijs always aims to tap into certain needs or trends in existing and future markets. studiogUILTY.com Paul Coenen Paul Coenen employs an intuitive and hands-on approach, where he explores his fascination for materials and both modern and traditional manufacturing techniques. His work is straightforward; the appearance of the objects are a consequence of material and technique. He graduated from the Design Academy Eindhoven in 2019. paulcoenen.nl
